Re-imagining Peace Processes: Celebrating the 130th Anniversary of the International Peace Bureau with a conversation on Peace

Webinar co-organized by the International Peace Bureau and the Inter-Parliamentary Union,

Wednesday, 9 February 2022 – 14:00 - 15:30 (CET)

The IPU and the IPB were both established by the peace activists of the nineteenth century who were very aware of the fact that in the long run, the results of their efforts would depend on active involvement and cooperation worldwide. Some 130 years later, the world is at a historical crossroads on matters relating to peace, climate, disarmament, and security and the involvement of all is still needed to overcome these global challenges.

The choices that lie ahead of us need to be educated by interactions between parliamentarians, youth, experts, and, most importantly, the people at local, regional, national, and international levels. Efforts to do so are carried out every day by the IPU and the IPB - two sister organizations working, in their own way, towards the same goals of peace, democracy, and a world without war.

To celebrate the 130th Anniversary of the International Peace Bureau, the IPB and the IPU are co-organizing a seminar to showcase the current work being done by both organizations on the issues of climate change, disarmament, democracy, and common security. Echoing the IPB appeal released during the 2021 World Peace Congress and reviewing the outcomes of the 142nd and recently concluded 143rd IPU Assemblies – this event will discuss the global challenges and the threat they pose to peace and security around the world. It will gather a panel of speakers to give us their insights into the work of these organizations, as well as re-imagine what the future of peace will look like.

Objectives of the event:

- Celebrate the 130 years anniversary of the International Peace Bureau;
- Underline IPU and IPB shared commitment to peace;
- Reevaluate the efforts and campaigns carried out over the last year.

Language: The event will take place as a webinar held in English, French, and Spanish.
