Regional Seminar on the Sustainable Development Goals and Gender Equality for the Parliaments of the Middle East and North Africa

Alexandria, Egypt, 18-20 September 2018

Organized jointly by the Inter-Parliamentary Union, the House of Representatives of Egypt and the Arab Inter-Parliamentary Union

Under the high patronage of the Egyptian Minister of Investment and International Cooperation, Dr. Sahar Nasr

General Information note

1. Background information

In September 2015, the United Nations General Assembly adopted a set of Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs). They will inform development agendas and policies over the next 15 years. The 17 Goals and their 169 targets are available at <https://sustainabledevelopment.un.org/?menu=1300>.

If successfully implemented, the SDGs will transform the world and peoples' lives. IPU Member Parliaments have committed to doing what is necessary to carry forward the vision of transformation embodied in the SDGs. Under the auspices of the IPU, parliaments have pledged to translate the SDGs into enforceable domestic law, hold governments accountable and align budgets with national sustainable development plans. To achieve these commitments, parliaments have concluded that they must strengthen their decision-making processes.

The IPU and its Member Parliaments were actively involved in negotiating the SDGs. They campaigned for democratic governance to be a stand-alone goal by arguing that it enables development in all societies. As a result of those efforts, Goal 16 was adopted. It highlights that governance, inclusion, participation, rights, and security are important parts of achieving sustainable development. The ultimate aim of Goal 16 is to meet the expectations and needs of citizens in an effective and democratic manner.

The Arab region has been affected by a number of political changes since December 2010, which have shaped a new political and economic reality for the countries that make up the region. The recent uprisings and conflicts have had a clear impact on the regional landscape, which experienced a drop in economic growth – from 5.9 per cent during 2005–2010 to 3.5 per cent during 2011–2014 – and the spread of unemployment, especially among women and young people. The decline is clearly more precipitous in conflicts zones, where a large proportion of the population is currently living under the poverty line.

In order to tackle these challenges and ensure peaceful and just societies as stated in the 2030 Agenda, there is an urgent need to strengthen efforts and develop economic policies that are fair, inclusive and long lasting. The SDGs can only be achieved if greater emphasis is placed on promoting sustainable economic growth, employment and decent work for all - most notably women of all socioeconomic backgrounds who represent a high percentage of the entire population.

The adoption of the SDGs has reinforced global commitments, specifically through Goal 5, to “achieve gender equality and empower all women and girls”. This commitment to gender equality constitutes the foundation for the achievement of all SDGs since it calls for political, social and economic priorities to take into account the participation of both men and women.

With sincere thanks to Bibliotheca Alexandrina for generously hosting the Regional Seminar

While some positive measures have already been taken, further progress is still needed, in particular to ensure gender equality in the areas of education, training and employment as well as in economic and political leadership. With respect to women's political participation, there has been an increase in the number of policies promoting equality in several Arab countries over recent years. A number of Arab countries have adopted temporary measures to increase women's participation in politics. Nevertheless, additional, more permanent policies are required to support women's economic and political empowerment in the long term that take into account their daily lives, rights and needs, including rural women and women living in countries and regions in crisis situations. These women play a pivotal role in development, but their contribution continues to be hampered by the multiple forms of discrimination and violence that they face and their lack of access to proper social services, economic opportunities and health care.

Hence, it is clear that Goal 5 as well as the SDGs as a whole will not be achieved without addressing the main obstacles including legal, social and cultural barriers to women's autonomy. This includes repealing discriminatory laws and ending violence and harmful practices against women and girls, such as child marriage and female genital mutilation. In these areas too, countries of the region are at a crossroads. Their commitment has been growing and they are increasingly adopting laws that prevent and combat discrimination and violence against women and girls.

2. Objectives and expected outcomes of the Regional Seminar

The Seminar will aim to define the opportunities available to and challenges facing parliaments in their implementation of the SDGs and gender equality. It will help participants to share experiences, good practices and challenges, and examine the steps that they can take to support SDG implementation at the national and regional levels.

A discussion of Goal 16 will centre on how parliaments should implement the SDGs so as to capture synergies and build coherence when national policies are being developed. To be able to do this, each parliament will need to evaluate its own institutional processes. Special emphasis will therefore be placed on developing more effective, accountable and transparent institutions as well as inclusive, participatory and representative decision-making processes that can effectively accelerate the translation of the global commitments of the SDGs into meaningful change on the ground.

Furthermore, the Seminar will offer a platform for participants to discuss concrete solutions from the region to achieving the SDGs, and most notably, gender equality and women's empowerment. By sharing knowledge and understanding of the best practices in the region, participants will aim in their respective parliaments to strengthen the consideration of women's effective participation in leadership position at all levels and in all sectors, and to combat discriminatory laws and practices and other social and cultural barriers to women and girl's empowerment.

The Seminar therefore aims to spur on greater national commitment as well as strong regional cooperation to develop strategies that effectively integrate all SDGs into national legislation.

3. Venue and dates:

Suggested day of arrival in Egypt via Cairo International Airport: 17 September
Bibliotheca Alexandrina, Alexandria, Egypt, from 18 to 20 September 2018
