- Violation of freedom of opinion and expression
- Violation of freedom of assembly and association
- Arbitrary arrest and detention2
- Torture, ill-treatment and other acts of violence3
- Abusive revocation or suspension of the parliamentary mandate4

A. Summary of the case

Over 600 criminal and terrorism charges have been brought against the members of parliament of the People’s Democratic Party (HDP) since 15 December 2015, when the Constitution was amended to authorize the wholesale lifting of parliamentary immunity. Hundreds of trial proceedings are ongoing against HDP parliamentarians, and former parliamentarians, throughout Turkey. Some of them also continue to face older charges in relation to the Kurdish Communities Union (KCK) first-instance trial that has been ongoing for eight years, while others face more recent charges. In these cases, their parliamentary immunity has allegedly not been lifted.

As of early April 2019, 10 former members of parliament continue to be held in detention under restrictive conditions applicable to terrorism suspects and convicts. According to the information provided by the complainant, Turkish courts have delivered around 10 new prison sentences against former and current members of parliament since the 139th IPU Assembly (Geneva, October 2018). The parliamentary authorities have stated that they were not able to confirm this number and have requested to be provided with additional information to help them to undertake verifications with the relevant authorities.

The complainant maintains its initial allegations that the charges against HDP members of parliament are groundless and violate their rights to freedom of expression, assembly and association. The complainant claims that the evidence adduced to support the charges against the members of parliament relates to public statements, rallies and other peaceful political activities carried out in furtherance of their parliamentary duties and their political party programme. Such activities include mediating between the Kurdistan Workers Party (PKK) and the Turkish Government as part of the peace process between 2013 and 2015, advocating publicly in favour of political autonomy, and criticizing the policies of President Erdoğan in relation to the current situation in south-eastern Turkey and at the border with Syria (including denouncing alleged crimes committed by the Turkish security forces in that context). The complainant alleges that such statements, rallies and activities did not constitute any offence, and that they fall under the clear scope and protection of the fundamental rights of members of parliament.

The most prominent cases concern the two former co-chairs of the HDP, Mr. Selahattin Demirtaş and Ms. Figen Yüksekdağ, who remain in detention. On 20 November 2018, the European Court of Human Rights ordered the immediate release of Mr. Demirtaş after finding violations of his fundamental rights. The Court found that most of the accusations brought against Mr. Demirtaş related directly to his conduct of a joint mission of the IPU Executive Committee and the Committee on the Human Rights of Parliamentarians, led by the IPU President, have continued throughout the 140th IPU Assembly, and the Turkish authorities have asked to receive a detailed road map listing details of all the authorities and persons that the delegation wishes to meet and places that it wishes to visit after the Assembly.

B. Decision

The Governing Council of the Inter-Parliamentary Union

1. Thanks the President of the Turkish IPU Group for her cooperation and for meeting with the Committee on the Human Rights of Parliamentarians during the 140th IPU Assembly to discuss the cases and concerns at hand, and for the information, documentation and video materials provided on that occasion; takes due note that the Turkish authorities have made a commitment to submit detailed information at a later stage;

2. Continues to believe that a mission to Turkey would help the IPU and its Committee on the Human Rights of Parliamentarians gain a better understanding of the situation of the HDP parliamentarians and former parliamentarians, but also of the broader political, security and human rights situation, including in south-eastern Turkey; still firmly believes that it is important that the IPU delegation is allowed to meet with some of the former parliamentarians in prison in addition to the meetings with all relevant authorities and other stakeholders; urges once more the Turkish authorities to grant permission to the IPU to meet with some of the prisoners and calls on the parliamentary authorities to endorse this request when resubmitting it to the Minister of Justice; continues to hope that the mission will take place soon;

3. Observes with deep regret that the parties continue to hold opposite positions and views about the factual allegations as well as about the underlying issues of concern and their causes, particularly as regards the situation in south-eastern Turkey; notes that a sticking point in the discussions is that this situation is viewed by one side as a conflict bred by unjust, discriminatory and violent state policies against the Turkish population of Kurdish origin and its representatives (otherwise referred to as the “Kurdish issue”), and by the other side as a serious terrorism issue warranting strict repression to preserve national security; is convinced that the resumption of a constructive political dialogue between the Turkish Government and the HDP – but also more broadly between the majority coalition and all opposition parties – is critical to support significant progress in the cases at hand given their background; points out that it is crucial to create an enabling environment, with sufficient space allowed to express political dissent and criticism of government policies, in order to ensure the success of any political dialogue; also continues to firmly believe that legislative reform to bring anti-terrorism legislation into line with international human rights standards would constitute a positive and long-awaited step forward that could help resolve the cases at hand; decides to consider ways for the IPU to act as a mediator to facilitate and support the resumption of such political dialogue and to promote legislative reform;

4. Decides to close the four cases pursuant to section 25(a) of its Procedure for the examination and treatment of complaints (Annex I of the revised Rules and Practices of the Committee on the Human Rights of Parliamentarians) of Mr. Dengir Mir Mehmet, Mr. Erdal Ataş and Mr. Nimetullah Erdoğmuş, in light of the information recently provided by both parties that there are no longer any files or prosecutions pending against them following final acquittals, and of Mr. İbrahim Ayhan, because he is deceased; also decides to declare admissible the new case of Ms. Ayşe Sürücü, and requests the Secretary General to submit the allegations to the Turkish authorities so that they can provide their observations; further requests the Committee to continue its factual verifications upon receipt of appropriate additional information from the parties, so that progress can be made towards closing cases when the Committee is able to conclude their satisfactory resolution;

5. Notes however with deep concern that the information received so far by the Committee, particularly court decisions, confirms to a large extent that HDP parliamentarians have been charged and convicted primarily for making critical public statements, issuing tweets, participating, organizing or calling for rallies and protests, and political activities in furtherance of their parliamentary duties and their political party programme, such as mediating between the PKK and the Turkish Government as part of the peace process between 2013 and 2015, publicly advocating political autonomy, and criticizing the policies of President Erdoğan in relation to the current conflict in south-eastern Turkey (including denouncing crimes committed by the Turkish security forces in that context); also points out with alarm that an automatic assumption appears to have been made that members of the HDP, a legally-authorized political party, are members and supporters of the PKK terrorist group, which amounts to a presumption of guilt; recalls its long-standing concerns and recommendations, particularly those reflected in the IPU 2014 mission report in relation to similar patterns of political repression in the past on the basis of the anti-terrorism legislation;

6. Considers therefore, based on the information it has obtained so far, that many of the statements made by the HDP parliamentarians and the acts that were incriminated as acts of terrorism were political statements and activities that fall squarely under the scope of the right to freedom of expression, freedom of peaceful assembly and freedom of association, and should have been protected as such by Turkey despite their critical content and occasional harsh tone; acknowledges nevertheless that each individual case may differ and that a careful and objective evaluation is required on a case-by-case approach on the basis of clearly established jurisprudence of the European Court of Human Rights; reiterates its prior requests to the Turkish authorities to share information on the specific facts and evidence adduced to support the charges and convictions against all HDP members before it so that the Committee is in a position to review the files and make further assessments as appropriate; notes with satisfaction that some of this information has been forthcoming during the 140th IPU Assembly and hopes to receive more in the near future;

7. Thanks the IPU trial observer for the report; points out that: the Turkish IPU Group and the complainant were provided with the report on 6 March 2019 and asked to submit official observations ahead of the IPU Assembly; the complainant submitted observations in writing and found that the report was “objective and captures well the arbitrary decisions and political motivations that shape the legal proceedings” and urged the Committee to continue trial observations; the Turkish delegation to the 140th IPU Assembly only presented oral observations when meeting with the Committee and stated that written observations would be forthcoming at a later stage; the Turkish delegation informed the Committee orally that it rejects significant parts of the trial observation report on the grounds that it includes partial value judgements and false factual information; notes with regret that the Turkish delegation declined to provide a short preliminary summary of its main observations during the 140th IPU Assembly, although it was invited to do so in order to have them initially included in the present report so as to reflect the views of the Turkish delegation until more detailed observations were provided; therefore takes due consideration of the wish of the Turkish delegation to delay the presentation of the report to the Governing Council but considers that the Turkish authorities were given sufficient notice and opportunities to share their views in a timely manner; hopes that the Committee will soon receive the detailed observations of the Turkish authorities and wishes to be kept informed in that regard;

8. Expresses deep concern at the findings of the trial observation report in light of all the available information; urges the Turkish authorities to grant unrestricted access to observers to all public trials in strict compliance with the Turkish Constitution and laws and expects the Turkish Parliament to ensure that foreign observers mandated by the IPU and by its Member Parliaments are granted systematic access in the future; expresses deep concern in this regard at the information received from the Danish Parliament that, out of nine trial observation missions it officially sent to Turkey, only two were granted access to the courtroom and that Danish parliamentarians were systematically denied access to all hearings related to the former HDP Co-Chairs, Mr. Demirtaş and Ms. Yüksekdağ, on various inconsistent and highly contestable grounds and practices; notes that this information lends further weight to the conclusions of the IPU trial observer, given their similarities; is concerned that the prospect of HDP members receiving a fair trial before independent courts may indeed be remote if all trial proceedings are conducted in such a way; requests the Committee to consider sending other trial observers to Turkey; requests such parliamentary delegations to keep it informed of the outcome of their missions;

9. Renews its call on all IPU Member Parliaments to take concrete actions in support of the urgent resolution of this case; and hopes to be able to rely on the assistance of all relevant regional and international organizations;
10. Requests the Secretary General to convey this decision to the relevant authorities, the complainant and any third party likely to be in a position to supply relevant information, and to pursue his efforts to organize an IPU mission to Turkey that meets all appropriate requirements from a human rights perspective;

11. Requests the Committee to continue examining this case and to report back to it in due course.
